Edith Cook has been a columnist for the Cheyenne Post newspaper for three years and a personal friend for longer than that. I first met Edith after reading her work in Wyoming's two largest newspapers – the Casper Star Tribune and the Wyoming Tribune Eagle. Her columns were always well written and thought provoking. We have maintained an archive of her work on the Cheyenne Post website.

On a personal level, Edith has always been easy to work with, eagerly accepting feedback and editing suggestions. She is also a good friend, who cares deeply for those around her and her community. She is a skilled musician, and we enjoyed her performance at a meeting of the Cheyenne Guitar Society.
